This is a very unique and eye catching low profile sofa. It is 11 feet long-- it comes in two x 5.5 feet long pieces that are also 5.5 feet deep at their deepest points. It is all the wonderful practicality of a big comfy couch with the mad style of a high-end modern design sofa. It was probably purchased at Inform, but we don't actually know for sure.

In addition to being super comfortable and super stylish, it's super HUGE. Dare we say one of a kind. It has lived a very good life, DOES show signs of wear, and still has a whole lifetime left in it. It is the perfect piece for the style and budget conscious person who wants quality, design, and comfort and is tired of the boring and crappily made IKEA style furniture that everyone seems to have. You'll need to have the square footage (so make sure you measure), but if you got that, this sofa is a no-brainer.

We are selling it only because it's too big to fit into our current studio apartment and we have since found a smaller (admittedly less cool) sofa to replace it. It's time to pass this bad boy on. We are not in a rush to sell it and won't be responding to low-ball emails or people who aren't serious about coming to look at it. Let's not waste each others time.

For sake of transparency, here are the flaws:

- It has some pilling and cat scratches/holes on the frame (has lived in a house with cats, but no soiling, only scratches/cat attacks)
- It has stains on the frame underside/bottom - these stains are not visible unless the cushions are removed (which is never the case except when the sofa is being moved). Stains are due to the sofa living with children and their not-so sippy cups.
- There is a wax spot on one of the back cushions (pictured) a bit bigger in size than a quarter. The cushion can face toward the inside of the sofa, so it's not visible.
- There is two black grease marks on the left lower base of the frame. This is from a bike brushing against it. Possibly removable.
- The left side seat cushion has a visible dimple where people have sat their butts (oh so comfortably) for many a day and night. The upholstery isn't worn at all, it's just the stuffing in the cushion that is slightly imprinted. I notice it, but it's pretty benign.
- The glass side table on the right side has a noticeable chunk missing from it due to an unfortunate rookie moving move. The tables can be removed for transport (we learned the hard way). This means there is a sharp edge so not suitable for untrained children. We've had and used it for years like this and it's nothing more than an eyesore. The glass is otherwise super heavy duty and thick.
- One of the glass tables is missing the hardware, this doesn't impact function much and the hardware (nuts/bolts) could be replaced with a trip to the hardware store.

Here is the Awesomeness:

- Nobody you ever meet will have this sofa
- You'll be the envy of all your house guests
- It's incredibly comfortable, whether you want to sit on the narrow spot or lounge in the longer spots. It's SO diverse in its comfort and function offerings.
- It's low profile and modern looking. Neutral and timeless upholstery colour.
- The upholstery is in great shape, it's thick and high quality.
- It seats a million people.
- It has nice curves with lots of potential to pair with an interesting coffee table
- It has two fully movable glass tables that make it a practical place to eat, drink, or compute while lost in the sea of sofa.
- The frame is solid and stable
- It is lightweight despite its size and easy to move because it's in two pieces and all the cushions are removable. It should fit up stairwells and in elevators and through doors of normal size.
- You can sleep two people on it quite comfortably
- The two 5.5 x 5.5 pieces can be separated and would stand alone as two sofas...but they do have a greater impact when put together in my opinion.
- It has never lived in a smoking or mildewy house.

- It's much cheaper than a new sofa of its style and specifications, by far.
